PROHIBITION FOES TO INSURE CONTEST FOR PUBLIC OFFICE

Will Oppose Pinchot And Davis As Part Of Program

WASHINGTON, May 23.—After ten years of wandering in the wilderness, the forces opposed to prohibition have definitely determined to emulate the example set by their dry antagonists for nearly half a century and make every man contest for public office a referendum on the wet-and-dry issue.

In conformity with this plan, an anti-prohibition candidate will be set up against Gifford Pinchot, when he runs for governor of Pennsylvania in November, and a wet opponent also will be found for James J. Davis' senatorial candidacy unless he satisfies the wets meanwhile that he is not wedded to the dry side of the question.

As in Pennsylvania, so in other states in the approaching nationwide elections. Everywhere there is a pronouncedly dry candidacy up for popular verdict, the organized wets, now militant and determined, will put up an opposing candidate if there is the slightest prospect of making a respectable showing.

It is the same method pursued for so many years by the prohibition party and the Anti-Saloon League—successfully pursued, too, in the end.

The long-considered campaign of the organized wets will be tried first in the eastern seaboard states, where the revolt against prohibition admittedly is strongest and most widespread. No election to congress or to the governor's chair is to be allowed to go by default to the drys. That much has been determined. The operating agency of the wets is to be the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, well financed by sincere opponents of prohibition, and now well-directed by executives of high caliber.

That is will take a long time to work out to completion is candidly admitted by the wets. But it took years of patient effort on the part of the now-defunct prohibition party and the Anti-Saloon League to bring about the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead law. The motto of the newly-militant wets apparently is: "What has been done can be undone—and by the same method." That method involves the election to public office of those opposed to existing conditions.

The Pennsylvania primary campaign just ended provided the first real test of the new wet philosophy.

A wet ticket composed of Thomas W. Phillips for governor and Francis H. Bohlen, a law professor, for senator, was thrown into the field against the powerfully-intrenched organizations of Pennsylvania Republicanism, and although defeated the wet ticket polled more than a quarter of a million votes in a total vote of about a million and a half.

When it is taken into consideration that the wet ticket was without organization support, that it had no precinct organization, and that it presented speakers in only about one-third of the counties in Pennsylvania, the showing Phillips and Bohlen made is not unimpressive.

BANDITS ROB BANK CASHIER OF CHANGE

WHEELING, W. Va., May 23.—J. W. Johnson, cashier of the Benwood Union Bank at Benwood, near here, was held up today by two bandits on the Benwood-Wheeling Road and was robbed of several hundred dollars in change.

Johnson was returning to Benwood from a Wheeling bank when he was crowded into the side of a concrete bridge and was forced to hand over the sack of silver at the point of a pistol. Union bank officials would not disclose the exact amount of money which was obtained by the bandits.

The cashier said that the Bullock car in which the bandits were riding bore a West Virginia license plate, No. 55-703.

The Benwood bank was held up about three months ago and was robbed of approximately $900.

BRITISH AVIATRIX IS SAFE ON ISLAND

LONDON, May 23.—A plucky young British aviatrix who for twenty hours worried the English more than India or politics was safe today at the village of Haillolik, near Atambua, on the island of Timor, according to dispatches to the London evening newspapers.

On a solo flight to Australia, which began at Croydon, May 5, Amy Johnson had reeled off her daily flights with precision, her light plane performing excellently.

Nearing her goal, she was unreported for nearly twenty hours, and then British public dropped everything else to follow and anxiously scan the newspapers for word of England's "girl Lindbergh."

She planned to hop off for Port Darwin, Australia, a distance of nearly 500 miles tomorrow.

MAYOR UNDER FIRE

PROGRAM TO PERMIT ADJOURNMENT JUNE 20 BEING PLANNED

Ratification Of Pact And Tariff Bill Goal Of Congress

WASHINGTON, May 23.—A program for enactment of the new tariff bill, ratification of the London naval treaty and adjournment of congress by June 20 was tentatively agreed today by administration leaders on Capitol Hill.

Ratification of the London pact was the only doubtful item on the program, as a majority of the senate seeks to postpone action until the next session of congress. Their wish will prevail unless the senate foreign relations committee completes its hearings within a week and reports the treaty to the senate with recommendation for immediate ratification.

The Swanson proposal for an exchange of notes between the United States, Great Britain and Japan to clear up interpretations of the "escalator clause" may result in postponing action on the treaty. It was contended by a large number of senators the treaty should not be acted upon until all its provisions are undisputed.

In event administration leaders finally decide to delay treaty action, the date of adjournment may be moved up to June 10.

The senate and house conferees met again this morning to complete their arbitration of the flexible tariff dispute. It appeared certain they would agree on the Hawley modification, which sets up the tariff commission for the first time in history as a bi-partisan, fact-finding and rate-fixing body.

President Hoover was reported to have approved the new flexible plan. Under it, he would be directed to accept or reject in entirety any recommendation of the tariff commission for a change in duties. His power would be exactly the same as he possesses on an act of congress.

"The new flexible provision," Senator Watson (R) of Indiana, explained, "would be exactly like the present law in principle but not in degree. The commission would be bi-partisan and it would be made a rate-fixing body, just like the interstate commerce commission. If anything can remove the tariff from politics, such a proposal should. The president would have to treat any recommendation of the commission just as he now treats an act of congress."

The president would have to either sign the recommendation or veto it. He could not change it in the slightest detail."

ACCIDENTAL SHOT KILLS MANAGER OF AIR LINE COMPANY

Springfield Killed As Pistol Drops From Holster

COLUMBUS, O., May 23.—Russell C. Kennedy, 26, Springfield, field manager for the Universal Air Lines, is dead here today as he received a bullet wound which he received when his revolver fell from his holster onto the gasoline tank which he was filling and exploded. The bullet entered his chest, killing him almost instantly.

The accident occurred when Kennedy went out on the field to meet a plane which was enroute from Louisville to Cleveland and which was piloted by T. J. (Jack) Lee. The pilot and Myron Riley, assistant chief pilot of the airport, had retired to a nearby soft drink stand when they heard the pistol shot.

The two men looked in the direction of the plane and saw Kennedy climb down from the tank, take a few steps backward and then cry: "It's got me, it's got me!" He then fell to the ground.

The fatally injured man was rushed to a hospital by policemen but died on the way to the institution.

In addition to attending the Ohio School of Aeronautics while working at the airport, Kennedy held an engine mechanics license from the U. S. Department of Commerce and also a private pilot's license.

REPLIES TO CHARGE

PREDICT METEORIC SHOWER WILL OCCUR IN HEAVENS JUNE 9

Date For Heavenly Display Changed; Will Be Bright

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 23.—Recalculation of the meteoric shower, predicted by Professor Yamamoto, director of the observatory at Kyoto, Japan has placed the time for the aerial display on June 9, according to a cablegram from Professor Stromgren, at Copenhagen, Denmark, to Professor Harlow Shapley, director of Harvard Observatory today. Previous computations by Professor Yamamoto, placed the date on May 29.

The shower will follow the orbit of the Schwassmann-Wachmann comet, as previously predicted, but its position will be near the star Chi, in the constellation of Hercules, instead of near the star Bradley 1147, according to the revised calculation.

This indicated, according to officials at Harvard Observatory, that the "heavily fireworks" would be brighter than expected before, in view of the fact that the star Chi is in the fourth magnitude and Bradley 1147 is in the magnitude.

Astronomers at Harvard stressed the fact that the prediction of a coming meteoric shower can not be made with the accuracy of an eclipse, but they wished to direct attention to the display chiefly for the purpose of verification of the prediction.

Police Baffled By Circumstances Of Illinois Murder

BERWYN, Ill., May 23.—Police squads waged a concerted search today for the slayer of Mrs. Marie Pelletier, housewife and mother of four children who was mysteriously shot and killed a short distance from her home here last night.

A few moments after she left her home to buy provisions for the next day three shots roused the quiet neighborhood and Mrs. Pelletier's body was found lying in the parkway two doors from her home. She had been shot through the heart and through the hand.

No eye-witnesses of the shooting could be found and police considered the theory that she was slain when she resisted a holdup man, for her purse could not be found. On the ground were two shells from an automatic pistol.

The woman's husband Louis and their son Lester, 24, identified the body. Officials questioned both, but neither could offer any clues. The husband was held for further questioning.

Police were puzzled when four blood-stained handkerchiefs were found in the Pelletier kitchen.

ALLEGED CHICKEN THIEF SENTENCED

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., May 23.—Representative coal operators of West Virginia, Kentucky, Virginia, and Tennessee have been called to meet in Washington on June 29 to plan a resistance campaign against the new lake cargo rate proposal which has been filed by the so-called "northern groups," consisting of western Pennsylvania and eastern Ohio operators.

The southern fields lake cargo rates committee will be joined in this conference by officials of the Chesapeake and Ohio, Western and Virginian, and Louisville and Nashville railroads.

A call was issued today by James S. Francis, Huntington, chairman of the southern group.

The northern group now holds thirty-five cent differential rates and is asking for a forty-five cent rate.

The Interstate Commerce Commission examiners are to hold the first hearing on the application on June 16.

ASSASSIN WOUNDS BRITISH OFFICIAL

LONDON, May 23.—Lord Strickland of Sizergh, head of the ministry and minister for police and posts of Malta, was wounded today when a man fired three shots at him in an attempted assassination in Malta, according to a Central News dispatch.

The dispatch did not say how seriously Lord Strickland was injured.

Paul Waddell alias George Myers, 21, Dayton, arrested several weeks ago as the driver of a liquor-laden truck on the Columbus Pike, changed his plea to guilty Thursday morning to a charge of transporting liquor shortly before his trial was scheduled to begin in United States district court at Dayton. Sentence will be pronounced next Tuesday by Federal Judge Robert Nevin.

PLEADS GUILTY

The report was prepared by the designer of the craft, Dr. E. Rumpf.

The proposed ship, Thaden said, will have a carrying capacity of 42,000 pounds and power will be furnished by ten Diesel engines which will be capable of developing 5,000 horsepower.

Design of the ship, which will be set on pontoons, will be radically different from Germany's present mammoth plane, the Dornier Dox, which can carry 100 passengers.

Quick action by Tex Anding (above), pilot, averted an air disaster at New York while Anding was conducting a pleasure flight over the city. One of his six passengers, intoxicated, seized the controls of the ship, and Anding engaged in a knock-down fight to regain them while the ship was in a spin.

WOMAN CONTINUES EFFORT TO PROVE MARRIAGE TO DR. SCULLY

CLEVELAND, O., May 23.—Mrs. Rockwell fail to establish conclusive proof of the marriage, a contention will probably be set up that she was the common law wife of the slain physician in an effort to claim part of Dr. Scully's $13,000 estate.

Mrs. Rockwell, the former Eunice Mitchell of Mt. Vernon, O., made a hurried and secret trip to Leesburg, Fla., recently, where she claims she was married to Dr. Scully in 1915. She admitted yesterday, following her return here, that she had failed to find in Leesburg the records of her marriage either among city documents or in the church files. The minister who performed the ceremony has been dead for several years, Mrs. Rockwell claimed.

Mrs. Rockwell entered the strange Scully case after police had given it up as an insoluble mystery. Dr. Scully, a supposed bachelor, was slain by an unknown murderer, in the physician's offices and living quarters here last March.

which virtually ends it, but longer than such high spots the reader will remember how Tom Catterson and his wonderful wife fought side by side, battle of the emotions and the spirit, unseen by the world, when they suddenly learned in middle age a certain heart-breaking secret about their twin sons.

The boys were 20. Alexander, or Sandy, was called slow but sure. He was dependable, thorough, conscientious, brief of speech and uncommunicative. Though he stirred little enthusiastic admiration anywhere, he stirred respect everywhere. People said he was just like his father, who was an eminent successful man in the Boston business world. Anthony, or Tony, was far quicker of thought, speech and action. He was a flashing half-back, and the life of every party. People said he was just like his mother, and he was frank and friendly. The two boys had never hit it off well together, but then, some twins are always quarreling.

The night after the stadium game the Cattersons learned that one of the boys was not their own son. A dying woman, who had been the nurse when the twins were born, told the story. One of the twins had died almost immediately. To quiet the insistent demands of Mrs. Catterson for her babies, the nurse had exchanged the dead twin for a newly born babe in a neighboring crib—an illegitimate child whose mother had died that night in giving him birth. Nobody in the hospital was the wiser for the exchange, and in the confusion that followed the nurse failed to distinguish between the two living babies. Thus she could not say which was Sandy and which was Tony.

After the opening chapters of "Touchstone" becomes the story of the way Tom Catterson and his wife reacted through the months and years to this staggering revelation—how it brought into their lives an inscrutable enigma that haunted every day and every night. They tried bravely to hold the balance true between the boys—loving one for his strength and the other for his weakness, and passionately hoping that neither would ever learn the secret.

Mr. Williams' story throughout is more that of the parents than that of the two boys—and predominantly that of the struggle, the doubt, the bewilderment, and the bafflement that tore their souls when, after twenty years, they learned part, and only part, of an unhappy truth.

"TOUCHSTONE," by Ben Ames Williams. Publication date, March 6th. Price, $2.50.

Annual Banquet - Dance Is Held By St. Brigid

ONE of the most interesting affairs of the school year was the annual Junior-Senior banquet at St. Brigid's School auditorium for students of the school, Thursday evening.

The tables were handsomely decorated for the occasion with a profusion of spring flowers carrying out pastel shades.

Following the banquet, Mr. Lawrence Hornick, junior, was toastmaster and the response to his welcome was given by Mr. Charles Mangan, senior. A short talk by the Rev. Father David Powers, closed the after-dinner program.

Following the banquet dancing was enjoyed in the auditorium which was beautifully decorated in pastel shades in the manner of an old fashioned garden. Flowers and lattice work were used throughout the hall. An old fashioned well, decorated with various colored flowers, was used for serving punch.

Approximately fifty couple attended the dance which was given for the students and alumni and their friends. Nick Rogers and his orchestra from Springfield furnished music for dancing.

FRED FLYNN HEADS THEATER GUILD FOR YEAR; PLAY GIVEN

It was with mingled feelings of jubilation and regret that members of the Little Theater Guild saw the end of the dinner and annual meeting of the organization Thursday evening—jubilation that once again the Guild had proved itself an organization capable of gaining the enthusiastic support of the community because of the excellent work it is doing, regret that with the meeting last night the current year comes to a close and there will be no "Dulcy," no "Miss Lulu Bett," no "Quare Medicine" to look forward to for the next few months. All that one can say is that the prospects for next year look bright if the very evident enjoyment of those present Thursday night can be taken as an indication of the place the Guild already holds in Xenia.

Nearly a hundred members and guests were present to enjoy the delightful dinner served by women of Christ Church in the Parish House. At the conclusion of the dinner a short business meeting was held and reports were presented by the chairmen of the different committees.

The following officers were elected to serve for the year 1930-31:

President, Fred Flynn; first vice-president, Mrs. Clara Shields; second vice-president, Miss Helen Samtryer; third vice-president, Isadore Hyman; treasurer, Harry A. Higgins; secretary, Miss Mil-dred Sandoe.

At the conclusion of the more formal part of the business meeting, Miss Lorena Paullin, introduced Miss Jean B. Elwell, asking her to talk a little of her ambitions past and present for the Guild. As usual, Miss Elwell delighted everyone with her charm and wit—and was so convincing in her statement that everyone could act, many write and all at least contribute financially that this writer for one went home firmly resolved not to be bashful any longer in admitting that she had a feeling she could be outdone.

The Senior Antioch Players will present three one-act plays Friday evening on the same East platform of Antioch Hall where, in 1853, Horace Mann, the first college president, received the keys of the institution. Names of plays to be presented at that time will be announced later.

Arthur E. Morgan, president of Antioch College, has been invited by Antioch seniors to deliver the address to the graduating class at the annual commencement exercises Saturday, June 28. If weather conditions permit the ceremony will be held outdoors, as has been the custom for several years.

A class of approximately sixty young men and women will receive degrees.

The exercises will be preceded by an academic procession at 10 o'clock. The procession will be assembled at the Horace Mann memorial library and proceed to "the mound." Musical selections will be presented under the direction of Mrs. Erna Juellig Broda.

Activities of the week prior to commencement will open with baccalaureate services for the graduating class Sunday, June 22. Bishop Paul Jones, who has accepted a position as director of religious activities at Antioch for the next school year, has consented to deliver the baccalaureate sermon.

The annual junior prom will take

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

ABOUNDING CONSOLATION — For as the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also abounds by Christ.—
2 Cor. 1:5.

CRIME OR OFFENSE

The German psychoanalyst who is reported to have told a Washington audience that all children, if left free to follow their instinctive impulses, would act as criminals presumably was using the word criminal in its broadest sense. Criminals are persons who commit crimes; and a crime is any offense punishable by law, whether it be relatively as innocuous as over-time parking or as heinous as murder. Ordinarily, however, we reserve the word crime for offenses of felonious proportions, while designating minor offenses as misdemeanors.

What the psychoanalyst probably meant was that children are born with wills of their own and are impatient of any restraint placed upon those wills before they have learned to make a virtue out of the necessity of compromising their wills with the wills of others. That is a matter of common observation. The race would have stagnated and disappeared ages ago if children had not been born with minds of their own and had not fought through life to have their own ways, with a reasonable respect for the right of other people to do the same thing. The wildest colt makes the best horse, after it is broken. The subservient child does not always make the most efficient citizen. Some colts can't be broken, apparently; but many more are spoiled in the attempt to break them. Some children seem to have been born "with the devil in them." A vastly larger number of those, children and adults, who resent the restraints of parental or social regulation, are the victims of bad parental management or fool laws.

The Chinese hold to the doctrine that all children are born good; that whatever evil propensities they later develop are acquired from the social maladjustments of an imperfect world. This doctrine is not incompatible with the psychoanalyst's theory that children are born impatient of restraint. That is not in itself either a crime or a vice. The fact that this impatience is frequently misguided or bedeviled by those in a position to shape it reflects more on society than on the child. Were all children born criminally inclined it would be difficult to explain whence the world has obtained sufficient socially inclined people to set up and maintain the systems of law and order that today cover so large a part of it.

The reluctance with which both children and adults surrender their wills or any portion of them to the wills of others contains a moral for society. The two means of breaking the anti-socially minded to harness are education and compulsion; and both can be carried too far. The race suffers even more than the individual from the attempt to deprive the latter of the right to do anything he likes which is not against the interests of the community as a whole; for it is by the assertion of individual propensities, within reasonable bounds, that the race progresses to new and better things. A multitude of unnecessary laws is to a nation what fussy parental interference is to the child. They multiply its "criminals."

COURT OF BUSINESS

The trouble with certain lines of business has been over-production. This over-production has been world wide. This leads Bernard Baruch, smart business man, to conclude that perhaps the solution of a great industrial problem lies in a new "supreme court of business." The leaders of industry have given the best of their minds to making business bigger. They have made a rich and prosperous country. Especially they have made themselves rich. Perhaps these same minds can be focused on meeting and solving the problem of over-production. It's a great idea of Mr. Baruch's. Let's think about it.

PREACHERS AND UNREST

A report made public by the general council of the Presbyterian church shows that the profession of the ministry is suffering from unrest. And why not? What men in all the world carry more burdens are entrusted with more grief, and discouragement than preachers? Their homes and offices are clearing houses for men and women who find life too much for them, who are defeated in the daily struggle. Preachers get little money and their hours are the hours of the day—twenty-four. They marry and bury, comfort and inspire. Most of us are little rivers, crooked, half-dry little streams that meander through life and trickle obscurely to the sea. The life of the minister, who is doing his work, is the little river close to the sea when the tide comes in. The tide of faith and courage and patience and gentleness gives constant meaning to their lives. And the tide doesn't come and go—not so much as with the rest of us. Ministers must live at full tide. They do.

WELL, WHAT OF IT?

Speaking of ministers, one learns from official sources that a fourth of the preachers in one denomination have no "theological education." Well, what of that? As far as most of us are concerned it's all right if none of them has theological education. What men want is the mind that is liberally educated, the heart that responds to need. A touch that is understanding and gentle.

REVISING THE BIBLE

It is said modern Bible students plan a revision of the New Testament. That is not as important as it sounds. The idea is there now—and plain enough.

So is the port of Vladivostok. So, of course, is the whole north coast. Ships from Odessa can leave the Black Sea only upon others' sufferance, and even then are bottled up in the Mediterranean.

TURBULENT INDIA PORTRAYEE AS INTENSELY FERTILE FIELD FOR COMMUNISTIC TEACHINGS

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON. — Moscow has had poor luck trying to communize China, all accounts agree.

The Chinese consider the family the proper social and economic unit. They consider it the proper governmental unit, too, and resist government on any larger scale all they can. Co-operation, even on a small community basis, is repugnant to them.

This philosophy is rooted in Chinese tradition thousands of years old. Religion is mixed up in it also.

Naturally communistic teachings do not "take" readily in such a country.

CANDIDATES GETTING BUSY AS PRIMARY CONTEST DRAWS NEAR

With the August 12 primary election in Greene County still nearly three months distant, those in well informed political circles are of the opinion that warm contests are promised for the Republican nomination for a number of county offices. Republican office seekers are expected to be plentiful.

An interesting situation may arise in the race for nomination for county auditor. Paul H. Creswell, serving out the unexpired term of former Auditor Ralph O. Wead, is still being prominently mentioned for the appointment as United States marshal for Southern Ohio but the two Ohio senators are not expected to announce their choice until after the primary elections in order not to embarrass the chances of U. S. Senator Ross McCullough of being nominated by the Republican party.

In that event it is considered a certainty that Creswell will be a candidate for auditor at the August primary. Should he receive the appointment as marshal he would then be in a position to withdraw from the auditor race before the November election and the name of Brant U. Bell or James Curlett would possibly be substituted on the ballot in Creswell's place.

George F. Sugden, who has served as deputy sheriff under Sheriff Ohmer Tate for two terms and is a former commander of Joseph P. Post, No. 95, American Legion, will definitely be a candidate for sheriff, and may have opposition from John Baughn, former deputy sheriff under Morris Sharp. Baughn, at present marshal of Jamestown, was defeated three years ago by Tate for the Republican nomination for sheriff.

Sheriff Tate, having served two consecutive terms, cannot be a candidate for re-election but may decide to seek some other office, possibly that of treasurer.

The only candidate definitely announced for county treasurer, succeeding Miss Helen Dodds, who has served two terms, is Harold Van Pelt, near Spring Valley, who has been deputy treasurer ever since Miss Dodds assumed office. Mrs. Carrie Faulkner is also being discussed as a possible candidate.

R. D. Williamson, candidate for another term as representative in the state legislature from Greene County, is the first and only public office seeker who has actually filed his nominating petition with the board of elections. Mrs. Carrie L. Flatter, prominent W. C. T. U. worker, and possibly Fred Ervin, may oppose him at the polls, it is said.

B. F. Thomas, county recorder, will also seek to be re-elected and will probably be opposed at the primary by Roy Wolf.

Attorney Marcus McCallister, rising young Xenia lawyer, will be a candidate for prosecuting attorney, an office which has been held for several terms by Attorney J.

SOLDIERS' RELIEF COMMISSION WILL SEEK COUNTY FUNDS

Appointment by Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy Wednesday of three members of the Soldiers' Relief Commission of Greene County, including a World War and Civil War veteran and a widow of a Spanish-American War veteran, is believed to have paved the way for a united effort of war veterans of the county to initiate steps to obtain an annual appropriation of approximately $25,000 from the county for relief work.

Sheriff Ohmer Tate, a World War veteran, was re-appointed for a term of three years ending in April, 1933. Mrs. Anna Lindsey, colored, Xenia, widow of a Spanish-American War veteran, re-appointed for a two-year term ending in April, 1932, and Russell Brewer, near Xenia, Civil War veteran, appointed for the one-year term ending in April, 1931, will now make up the membership of the relief commission.

Brewer, perhaps the youngest of the approximately fifteen surviving Civil War veterans in the county, is the new member of the commission, filling the vacancy caused by the death of H. H. Conklin. Terms of Sheriff Tate and Mrs. Lindsey had expired, making necessary a Introducing the greatest drunkard the screen has ever known—Charles Sherman Ruggles, Jr.

Is the eighth wonder of the world—a native son of California.

Born in Los Angeles, February 8.

Childhood ambition was to become a baker. Used to deliver pastries for the neighborhood baker and lived for the day when he could have his cake and eat it, too.

Started out to be a doctor in accordance with his father's wishes but stopped suddenly one day when he tasted some of the pills he had prescribed for his patients.

Can't think of any good reason why he became an actor except that a friend told him that thought might make a good one.

Early Tribulations

His first role was that of a butler. All he had to do was to walk across the stage with a huge can of delirium in his hand. Some practical joker, knowing that he was new to the game, suggested that he inject a little comedy into his part. Thanking him for his advice, he tripped himself as he walked across the stage and fell sprawling to the ground. The audience howled, and sure that he was the hit of the show, he made a smiling exit. The manager greeted him with his notice. Decided then and there that comedy was emphatically NOT his forte.

Joined a stock company that went broke. The manager couldn't afford to pay any salary but offered the company part of the wardrobe as compensation. Ruggles drew a frock coat and hat. Still has the hat.

One of his pleasantest stage recollections in "The Passing Show"

Paramount studio considered it quite a "coup" when they secured his services for the role of drunkard reporter in "Gentlemen of the Press." Hasn't drunk as many bottles since he was a baby as he has in his first four pictures.

Only played this type role once on stage.

Is Commuter

Commutes to the studio, every day in his Packard roadster from his home in Setauket, Long Island. Likes to tell you about the vegetables that grow in his own garden.

Considers Kay Johnson's performance in "Dynamite," one of the finest contributions to the talking screen. Calls Jack Oakie the 1930 comic.

Is a handball expert. Has held the championship for the Los Angeles and New York Athletic Clubs for several years.

Once at the tender age of ten wanted to make a hit with the little girl next door so stole some flowers from the Golden Gate Park. Spent the night in jail for his gallantry.

His father doesn't object to his career any longer. Is riding around in a Lincoln town car now on the strength of it.

HAVE NEW MEMBERS

Five new members were taken into the Hi-Y organization at Xenia Central High School Thursday night, taking the places of five seniors who will graduate in June. The new members are: Paul McClellan, junior; David Short and William Wagner, sophomores, and Carl Smith and Maurice Hyman, freshmen. Newly-elected officers were also installed at the Thursday night meeting. Initiation exercises for the new members were held Wednesday night and final degrees were given them on the following night.

PETITIONERS URGE FIREWORKS BAN; POLICE WANT EQUIPMENT

Independence Day is still more than a month away but nevertheless fireworks characterized the bi-monthly City Commission meeting Thursday night.

A petition introduced by J. J. Downing, bearing the signatures of eighty-six Xenians as well as an endorsement of the Xenia Ministerial Association, requesting that the commission pass an ordinance prohibiting the sale of fireworks as a step toward a safe and sane Fourth of July celebration, was placed on file.

Legislation was also started for a bond issue of $1,200 to purchase additional equipment for the Xenia Police Department and ordinances regulating and licensing second-hand stores, junk shops and pawnbrokers were placed on their first reading.

The fireworks petition declared that "we, the undersigned, believing the use of fireworks promiscuously by individuals in celebration of the Fourth of July has always been a dangerous, foolish practice which has already been condemned by so many different cities; that is now becoming unpopular, and rapidly a relic of the past, therefore we request the City Commission to keep abreast of the times in making our city safe and sane on this or any other day by passing an ordinance prohibiting the sale and use of all explosives of this kind, and attaching a penalty to the violation of this ruling, sufficient to make it effective." The petitioners also urged passage of an ordinance prohibiting the use of gas stoves without pipes.

In the petition was included a notation that the Xenia Ministerial Association had passed a resolution May 19 endorsing any movement in favor of a sane and safe Fourth of July.

The ordinance providing for issuance of notes by the city in anticipation of a $1,200 bond issue for the purpose of acquiring police equipment for the protection of the citizens of Xenia was placed on its first reading after an attempt to pass it as an emergency measure met with failure. With only four commissioners present, Commissioner H. L. Binder cast a dissenting vote, explaining that he desired more time to consider the matter of expending so much money for this purpose.

It was pointed out that the bond issue would finance purchase of an adequate supply of chemical warfare gas equipment such as has been authorized for the sheriff's office and that a new police car is also needed.

Police Chief O. H. Cornwell gave the commission a tear gas demonstration in Shawnee during the evening.

The ordinance regulating and licensing second-hand stores and junk shops and providing penalties for violations stipulates that these dealers must keep a separate book, open to inspection by members of the police force, in which must be written at the time of purchase of all second-hand articles, a description of them together with the name, description and address of the person from whom the articles were purchased and received. Articles purchased or exchanged shall be retained by the purchaser for at least thirty days before disposing of them.

The dealer will also be required to deliver each day at police headquarters a correct copy from each book containing a description of each article bought or received during the preceding day and the name and address of the person from whom it was obtained.

All dealers and peddlars must obtain a license at an annual fee of $15. The penalty for violation of provisions of the ordinance is a fine of from $25 to $500.

A second ordinance regulating and licensing pawnbrokers contains somewhat similar provisions except that no pawnbroker must change, alter or deface any article or voluntarily release possession of any goods pledged with him or purchased by him until the expiration of forty-eight hours after the delivery to the chief of police of a copy of all articles coming into his possession and the names and addresses of the persons from whom the articles were obtained.

These ordinances were drawn, it is believed, as a means of simplifying the task of tracing stolen property.

Commission passed a resolution declaring the necessity of improving Maple St. from Detroit St. to Chestnut St. by constructing curbs and gutters and a storm sewer, and placed on its first reading an ordinance providing for issuance of anticipatory notes to finance construction of a main sewer from an existing sewer running between King and Detroit Sts., north to the site of the new state armory in the Doolittle Addition. The cost is estimated at $1,500.

Memorial Day and Peace

One of the slogans that appealed in the late World War was, "This is a war to end war." Those who ever engaged in war have the hope that the end of such human slaughter has been reached.

Baroness Von Suttner says, "We can never undo what has been done and we cannot stop what is going on; but we can help prepare a new order in which these things will never occur again."

William E. Channing said, "War will never yield but to the principles of universal justice and love and those have no sure root but in the religion of Jesus Christ."

The Theater

Miss Eva LeGallienne's Civic Repertory Theater in Fourteenth St., New York, may have had its troubles in the past but the group appears to be going over big in its current Shakespearian rendition.

Quite a lot of show-going customers in New York have just discovered that the Fourteenth St. Theater may as well be placed on their calling list as a result of the production of "Romeo and Juliet."

Eva is the actress daughter of the poet, Richard LeGallienne. She passed up a comfortable starring career a few years ago to take over the ancient playhouse and present classics for the masses.

The first season was called an "artistic" success—which probably meant that the venture was several thousand dollars in the hole.

It is reported that there are Rialto rumblings, as usual, at the selection of Marc Connelly's "The Green Pastures" for this year's $1,000 Pulitzer prize play. It is hinted that the play does not qualify as an original piece because its author admits it was suggested by Roark Bradford's Southern sketches.

In the meantime, however, the Connelly opus continues to be sold out weeks in advance and the $1,000 Pulitzer prize probably looks like small change to Connelly beside the fat royalty checks he is receiving.

The G. H. S. Club is publishing the first annual high school paper ever attempted at Xenia High School.

But undaunted by the jibes of drama deacons, Miss LeGallienne got busy in the land of figures and soon had a list of backers that looked like a composite Social Register and Guide to Wall Street.

Still the scoffers railed that her high-brow repertory of Chekhov, Ibsen, Tolstoy and the like but the current rendition of the Capulet-Montague love saga, coming on the heels of the best season on record, has turned some of the scoffers to boosters. It has come to be the smart thing to see little Eva ascending balcony-award to the praise of a discriminating audience.

While Miss LeGallienne has apparently sold the Civic Repertory Co., with the aid of Shakespeare, "Romeo and Juliet" has apparently sold Shakespeare to her. She has become so fond of the bard that she wants to do others of his plays and she may appear as

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO DESERVED TO WIN

READ THIS FIRST:
Clara Dee Forester, the motherless, pampered, beautiful product or a modern boarding school life of idle extravagance, supplemented by extensive travel, scarcely knew her father, Matthew Forester, who had indulged with his immense wealth, not wisely, but too well, in his effort to provide her with the "best in life," since the death of her young mother, whom he had idolized. Forester goes to his lawyer, John Gregory, and makes a will leaving one dollar to Clara Dee. Forester dies, and Gregory has just read the will to Clara Dee.

Thus Clara Dee found herself put on her own resources, like thousands of girls in offices and shops. But her father believed that his girl would measure up to his mark if she were given a chance.

Clara Dee leaves her luxurious home and secures a room at Mrs. Flynn's boarding house.

Mother Flynn introduces Clara Dee to the other boarders. One girl, called Estelle, gives Clara Dee some pointers about getting a position.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VI

"That orb'd continent, the fire That severs day from night"

The sun, glaring through the wrinkled shade which she had neglected to draw down, struck sharply across Clara Dee's eyelids next morning, as it already jeered at her in her helpless condition. She stirred, wrinkled her forehead at the piercing ray of light and spoke irritably. "Heavens, draw the curtains, Marie. What time is it anyway?"

Surprised into full consciousness by the absence of Marie's respectful response, "Eleven o'clock, Mademoiselle," she sat up quickly and gazed for a bewildered moment about the room. In an instant her brain began to function and she remembered everything. She reached under the pillow for her watch, a thin, oblong, one, fashioned of platinum and set with sapphires and diamonds. The frail hands pointed vertically. Six o'clock! She sprang out of bed and made as perfect a toilet as she could manage with the service of the wash bowl and pitcher of cold water.

Her breakfast, of muddy coffee, oatmeal and stale rolls, she ate with surprising relish at the early hour of seven—the spirit of her adventure had gripped her imagination and she was eager to begin her new work—even filling. When she arrived at the address of the clipping in her purse, she was surprised to find the room almost filled with girls of every kind and description. As she slipped into a chair at the end of the line she was conscious of harsh whispers and heard the nearest girl remark

"Ye gods and fishes, what's she here for?"

The room was miserably warm and stiflingly close, but Clara Dee almost ignored that, she was so anxious and puzzled. Presently a man opened the closed door opposite and announced that they needn't wait longer, a girl had been hired. His eye caught the despair and disappointment in Clara Dee's and he stared at her for an amazed moment. She couldn't understand why people stared so at her, she certainly didn't look as impossible as many of these other girls. Some wore limp cotton frocks of cheap prints, some shabby, none-too-clean suits. The girl next to her wore a much draped creation of black lace, with a huge black hat which drooped over her thin, badly painted face and tied with long velvet streamers beneath her chin. The short, narrow skirt and her crossed third of the thin beige stockings on her thin legs. "Surely, I look more presentable than she," thought Clara Dee, almost in tears despite her show of confidence. She little guessed that the striking unattractiveness of her well groomed appearance in such a group as this, had prompted their curious glances.

She even thought, a little bitterly, that probably none of them had needed the position as desperately as she needed work which would give her an income. This was not selflessness on her part, as yet she had only glimpsed poverty and need; it did not occur to her that many, many people live through months and years, even all their lives, in poverty and direst need, with perhaps only a few pennies between them and starvation in a continual struggle for existence. She had thought that because she was willing to work, it would be quite simple to find a way to earn her living. Previously, any thought of poverty had been associated with laziness, dishonesty or phys-

"She hasn't!" Gregory snapped, grimly. "Her father left her nothing. Haven't you heard?"

"Oh! say—that's a rotten trick. A girl like that surely doesn't deserve such treatment. If you'll give me an introduction, Uncle John, I'll marry her at once. One look at her is enough to make a fellow know he wants her."

"Well—and how about the girl—suppose she didn't want you?"

"Oh, of course, that's her side of it. But just the same you can't expect her to accept a situation like that with pleasure and merriment. Or is she going to contest the will?"

"No—not at all. She hasn't mentioned it. She is behaving far differently than I had expected she would—or than her father anticipated, for that matter." He gazed out of the window—over the plateau of roofs and reaching spires—to the river in the distance.

"Are you serious about wanting to meet her?" he inquired after several moments of quiet meditation.

"You bet I am—can't you have her over for dinner and I'll drop in, some evening soon?"

"No, that wouldn't do. She would never even accept my invitation, much less respond to your attentions. But I'll tell you what, Win, she's a fine girl and worth a little strategy, if you'll follow my plan. You haven't yet decided to accept your father's proposition for entering the firm, have you?"

"No sir, I can't, Uncle John. I'm about as much interested in the lumber business as a man in the tropics is in furs. And he has no more sympathy for my ambitions. When I have the means for financing my experiments and am not compelled to work for a living, I can't understand why he won't let me experiment until I've at least proved that I'm right or wrong. But I know I'll succeed before long, in discovering some of the methods and elements I'm experimenting with."

Gregory nodded assent. "No reason why you shouldn't follow your inclinations as long as you have some kind of an ambition. Your experiments might prove more valuable to the world than any lumber business ever was. I have great confidence in you and your ability. Ask your father to allow you six months for a vacation—you've only just finished college and are entitled to some time for yourself. Plan a trip which will make communication difficult and—They talked in confidential tones for almost an hour and Winfield left the office in exultant spirits.

The day was almost gone and Clara Dee was wearied to exhaustion, so she returned to Mrs. Flynn's and bathed her blistered downstairs face and arms with cool water. A hot chill quivered through her damp, tired body. She longed intensely for the refreshing privacy of her own bath with its glistening white tile and marble and silver appointments, the sunken bath and glass-enclosed shower. What a vast difference there could be in the comforts of life!

She anticipated the supper hour more eagerly than on the previous evening, for she had only had a malted milk for lunch, seated on a high stool in a corner drug store, with a small boy, messing at a sticky soda, on one side of her, and a stout colored woman, eating a banana split, on the other. She almost occupied half of Clara Dee's stool in her attempt to balance on her own; like a large plate being juggled on the tip of a sword in a vaudeville act, thought Clara Dee.

She smiled wanly at the recollection and hurried downstairs quite as eagerly as the other boarders when the supper bell rang. Her neighbors at the table were eager for news of her adventures. She answered their questions with a great display of amusement, saying that she had most certainly "got her ears nibbled that time" but none of them knew just how complete had been her disillusionment that day. They seemed not at all surprised that she had failed to step into just the position of her choice on that first day. Indeed, their surprise would have been much greater, had she succeeded.

THERE CAN BE NO QUESTION LATER

When You Pay a Bill by Check, the Cancelled
Voucher is Legal Proof of Payment

HERE'S no fuss or argument about disputed payments, for everything's down on paper where it belongs. The written record is quickly available and settles the question forever. Proof of payment is only one of many direct advantages of checking service.

Your money is handled without risk when you pay by check. A few minutes at your desk replaces the hours of running about and waiting if you paid in cash. Think what this one phase of the service means to you.

Men of affairs pay by check and you take your rightful place among them when you use your bank's full service. Your bank connection gives you added prestige, and it brings you and your banker into friendly contact. He can help you in matters of finance, business or personal, and will welcome the opportunity.

A checking account visualizes your expenses. You can see where every penny goes and control expenditures more easily. Your payments can be for the exact amount. No chance for errors in change.

The greatest benefits to you are realized when you keep an adequate reserve regularly on deposit. Then you have money, instantly ready for every opportunity to profit, ready to protect you in emergency.

Other Benefits

Your surplus funds go to help carry on the industries, public utilities, building construction and retail institutions. As they prosper, the community prospers and your own money pays you another profit.

An adequate balance serves you directly in several ways, and again through community prosperity. Build your checking reserve so that you may receive the full earning power of your money.
